TAIPEI

Jones Day opened our Taipei Office in 1990 to meet the fast-growing needs of the Firm's international and Taiwanese clients. Since that time, the Taipei Office has advised many Asian, U.S. and European businesses and individuals in connection with their investments, acquisitions, joint ventures, intellectual property, financings, securities offerings and dispute resolution matters in and outside Taiwan.

Lawyers in the Taipei Office are fully qualified to practice both Taiwanese and U.S. law. Most of them are multilingual, speaking English and Mandarin Chinese as well as other Chinese dialects, including Taiwanese.

These lawyers have legal experience in Taiwanese and foreign jurisdictions. The Taipei Office regularly advises clients on a wide range of Taiwanese legal issues, as well as on U.S. and other international legal matters.

Corporate and financial transactions are major practice areas of the Taipei Office. Such transactions include local and international mergers and acquisitions, joint ventures, technology licenses, banking, derivative financial products and debt and equity securities offerings. The Taipei Office also regularly represents clients in high-tech industries, including high-tech enterprises, venture capital companies and private equity funds and investors.

Our lawyers are also experienced in handling all facets of commercial dispute resolution matters, including local and international arbitration, mediation, litigation, enforcement of foreign judgments and service of process. We have extensive experience in construction and engineering disputes, tax and other regulatory litigation. The Taipei Office also has a strong practice in contract negotiation, tender offer planning, and general consultation on infrastructure, BOT and other construction projects.

Intellectual property is another substantial practice of the Taipei Office. The increasing awareness of IP as valuable intangible assets among the high-tech industries calls for effective enterprise intellectual property management that integrates a proactive technology management program. The Taipei Office, together with Jones Day's worldwide intellectual property team, provides comprehensive services such as IP management, surveys and audits, global prosecution/registration, licensing and infringement/enforcement matters.

The Taipei Office, along with the Firm's Beijing, Hong Kong and Shanghai offices, also represents clients in their investments and other transactions in China. This Greater China practice often involves cross-border transactions requiring sophisticated offshore investment structuring and third-country participation.
